Building Legislation Amendment (Smoke Alarms) Act 2005 – update

This Circular is to provide councils, accreditation bodies, relevant government agencies and industry groups with information on the legislation concerning smoke alarms.

To improve community safety, the Government in June 2005 announced that it would introduce new laws making it compulsory for smoke alarms to be fitted in all existing homes and other buildings where people sleep.

The Building Legislation Amendment (Smoke Alarms) Act 2005 (the Act) was enacted by the NSW Parliament on 1 July 2005. The Act will commence on 1 May 2006.

The Act amends both the Environmental Planning and Assessment Act 1979 (EP&A Act) and the Residential Tenancies Act 1987 to provide for the installation and maintenance of smoke alarms in existing buildings in which persons sleep.

The Department, in conjunction with other agencies, is currently developing the regulations which will provide details in relation to the new provisions of the EP&A Act. This work includes determining the specific types of buildings the provisions will apply to, the types of smoke alarms that need to be installed, the location of such alarms and any associated maintenance requirements.

A copy of the legislation is available on the NSW Parliamentary Counsel website at: www.legislation.nsw.gov.au under 'Acts in Force'.

Further advice on the progress of this work will be issued by this Department in the near future.
