

Declaration of interest form for community consultative committees

All members of community consultative committees must sign a declaration of interest form. Members must require to disclose any pecuniary (financial) and non-pecuniary interests before they join the committee and keep this declaration up to date while they are members of the committee.

This declaration protects the integrity of the committee and the reputation of its members.

Examples of a pecuniary interest may include, but are not limited to:

- holding shares in an entity proposing or carrying out all or part of the project
- holding a private contract with the proponent
- holding voluntary acquisition or mitigation rights under the proponent's consent
- receiving sitting fees or payments of personal expenses from the proponent
- a member representing a stakeholder group when the stakeholder group has received funding or grants from the proponent.

A pecuniary interest is an interest a person has in a matter because of a reasonable likelihood or expectation of appreciable financial gain or loss to the person. Money does not have to change hands for there to be a pecuniary interest.

A non-pecuniary interest is a private or personal interest that does not amount to a pecuniary interest but that may arise from family or personal relationships, or involvement in community, social, or other cultural groups that may include an interest of a financial or non-financial nature. It may also include the receipt of gifts, benefits or hospitality from the proponent.

No pecuniary or non-pecuniary interest to declare

As a member of the Community Consultative Committee, I declare that I have no pecuniary or non-pecuniary interest that would prevent me from carrying out my role on the Community Consultative Committee impartially and in the best interests of the local and broader community.

Should this change, I agree to update this declaration and advise the committee accordingly.
